CONFLICT IS BITTER

London Uncertain Whether Greek King Remains In District

LONDON, May 20 — German parachute troops have attacked the Greek island of Crete in "great strength," but the situation is "well in hand," Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons today.

LONDON, May 20 — A tremendous battle for possession of the Greek Mediterranean island of Crete raged today as German parachute troops landed there in "great strength."

(A communique issued by the British middle east command in Cairo stated: "Early this morning German parachutists and airborne troops attempted to secure a footing in Crete. A number already have been accounted for.")

Informed British quarters, receiving sketchy reports of the fighting, indicated the attack had been launched by the greatest force of air-borne soldiers yet known to modern warfare.

Covered by dive-bombers that poured down high explosives from great altitudes, the German forces were reported to have parachuted to earth in stupendous numbers. Savage hand-to-hand fighting was believed to be in progress as the Nazi parachutists engaged Greek and British defenders of the island.

The sudden attack — which developed literally like a bolt from the blue — bore out German warnings that a new and violent stage of warfare was about to begin after the recent relative respite from land action.

British Confident

British sources were confident, however, that the British, New Zealand and Greek forces massed on the island would put up a "stern and resolute resistance."

The new attack was revealed by informed London quarters studying a report from the middle east.

"A German parachute troop attack on Crete is being made," they declared.

Reports received in London indicated the attacking parachutists are being covered by high altitude dive bombing raids on the island, where the Greek king, George II, and his government fled just before the fall of Athens.

POLISH REFUGEE CLAIMS HITLER WARRING ON U. S. THROUGH SABOTAGE PLOT

LONDON, May 20—Gen. Ladislas Sikorski, prime minister of the Polish government-in-exile, issued a solemn warning today that Chancellor Hitler "already is warring on the United States."

Sikorski, who returned recently to London from a visit to the United States and Canada, said Hitler is attacking America by means of sabotage, propaganda and strikes.

He charged that specially trained German agents have been sent to America for this purpose.

17 MORE COUNTY MEN CALLED UP FOR ARMY DUTY

15 Whites And Two Negroes To Be Inducted; Summons Third Largest

Selective Service officials Tuesday received tentative calls for 15 white men and two Negroes for the period beginning June 9.

The notice to local draft officials came in the form of two tentative calls, call number 17 for two colored men and call number eighteen for 15 white men. The call is the largest the county has received since March 18 when 18 men were called into service, and the third largest it has received since the enactment of the Selective Service Act. The county's largest quota came on February 6, with 34 registrants being inducted.

Selective Service officials have not completed the June 9 list, although they say the quota may be filled without a heavy drain on the "quick call" list. Class 1-A men now waiting induction total 203. The board is expected to complete its classification of the county's 2,801 registrants this week. Over 2,000 already have been classified, the local board announces.

Largest number of registrants have been placed in Class 3-A because of dependency. Of the 1,592 men now classified, 27 have been placed in Class 1-A.

Reports from State Selective Service headquarters state that 141 Negro and 3,073 white selectees will be inducted into the armed forces under two draft calls. Negroes will be called up June 9, while the white selectees must report between that date and June 19, according to state headquarters.

Of the total, 1,449 will report at Cleveland; 355 at Toledo; 650 at Fort Hayes, Columbus; 531 at Fort Thomas, Ky., and 88 at Huntington, W. Va.

KILLER OF WIFE, CHILDREN ENDS LIFE WITH GUN

WILMINGTON, Del., May 20—Clarence Webb, 28-year-old farm manager, shot and killed himself today when cornered by state troopers who wanted him for the ax murders of his wife and two young children.

After being trailed by the policemen in a prowl car, Webb leaped from his automobile near Odessa and shot himself through the stomach. He died four hours later on the operating table at Delaware Hospital, on the outskirts of Wilmington.

Webb's death wiped out the complete family of four who lived on a farm at Glasgow, near Newark.

Before he died, Webb confessed the triple slaying but gave no motive for the brutal crime, police said.

RUMORS SAY ARMY MAY LOCATE CAMP IN PICKAWAY AREA

While a delegation of Pickaway and Ross County farmers and industrial representatives was in Washington, Tuesday, protesting for the second time the suggested location of an army cantonment along the west bank of the Scioto River in the two counties, farmers in Madison, Harrison and Walnut Townships and northwestern Fairfield County were uneasy over rumors that the War Department might be considering the establishment of a camp site in that section.

Several farmers in Walnut Township have reported that surveyors have been in that area, but no reports, either official or unofficial have come from the War Department that consideration is being given to the Walnut Township-Fairfield County district.

With reports from officials in the War Department that the Pickaway-Ross county camp site "was too valuable for agricultural purposes" to justify placing a cantonment there, farmers in good farming sections of northeastern Pickaway County could not justify a government survey in their area.

The anti-cantonment delegation from Ross and Pickaway counties is expected to return Wednesday. It includes Howard Orr and Beryl Stevenson of Pickaway County and Robert Immell and Philip Dunlap of Ross County.

Although farmers in the Ross-Pickaway section have been assured that their farms will not be molested, the delegation hopes by a final appeal to guarantee no placement of the camp in the area.

MORE NEW YORK TEACHERS LOSE THEIR POSITIONS

NEW YORK, May 20—Ten more instructors, tutors and clerks at City College have been suspended and two others were slated for suspension today in the latest "purge" of Communists as a result of the probe of subversive activities in New York city schools by a state legislative committee.

The twelve were accused of being, or having been previously members of the Communist Party, of refusing to cooperate with the Rapp-Coudert investigating committee, and of obstructing the investigating body by giving false and evasive testimony on the witness stand. Fourteen City College teachers and clerks previously were suspended.

Two of the latest group of clerks suspended face charges of having participated in the publication of the Teacher Work, Communist publication at the college.

F. D. R. AMUSED BY QUESTIONS OF REPORTERS

WASHINGTON, May 20—President Roosevelt greeted with some amusement at today's press conference the flurry of reports concerning predicted action by the Washington administration in the international situation.

When a reporter inquired whether questions concerning Dakar, were in order, the President said he was looking for someone to put those questions in the same category with "dear old ding dong" about which once was so much written in the way of predicting an American expeditionary force.

Dakar is the West African port held by the French which some Washington officials have said should be taken over as a safeguard against possible German aggression from that point. Similarly, the President was asked about reports that he was considering dispatch of a special message to congress on the foreign situation and had discussed the idea with congressional leaders yesterday.

He replied there was nothing to that, that the possibility was discussed every week, that sometimes it materialized and sometimes it did not.

On Purge List?

ACCORDING to the British radio, Willy Messerschmitt, famed German airplane designer, has been placed on the Nazi list of proposed purges for helping Rudolf Hess, No. 3 Nazi, in his flight to Scotland. Hess made his sensational flight in a Messerschmitt warplane.

LaGUARDIA FILLS NEW POSITION IN DEFENSE PLANS

WASHINGTON, May 20—President Roosevelt today unfolded a vast civilian defense program, to be headed by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, and designed to give every man and woman not in the military service an opportunity to actively contribute to the nation's defense.

The chief executive signed an order creating "the Office of Civilian Defense" and announced that LaGuardia would arrive in Washington tomorrow to open it. LaGuardia, he said, will continue to serve as mayor of New York. He will function as home defense chief without pay, as will other key figures in the set-up.

BRICKER SIGNS BILL TO PERMIT AUTO TAG USE

COLUMBUS, May 20 — Governor John W. Bricker today signed the Nickels Bill, passed by the 94th general assembly, permitting automobile owners to display new license plates after March 1 instead of the present date of March 10.

The governor also signed three other bills. They were:

Sen. Jameson (R-Lorain) creation of a state defense council.

Sen. Hughes (D-Butler) to prohibit the sale and manufacture of slugs and tokens.

Rep. Betts (R-Hancock), limiting the hours of employment of females.

The governor said that more than 90 bills would be disposed of next Tuesday.

EX-JUDGE NAMED FOR ACCEPTING $12,500 AS GIFT

PHILADELPHIA, May 20 — Stepping into an area from the street to avoid the eyes of passers-by, retired Circuit Court Judge J. Warren Davis accepted $12,500 wrapped in newspapers from a man whose bankruptcy case he handled in court, a federal trial jury was told today.

Details of this and another alleged illegal financial transaction were outlined by Walter H. Gahagan Jr., special assistant attorney general, as he opened the government's case against Davis and Morgan S. Kaufman, Scranton attorney.

Gahagan charged Davis with taking the money—12 one thousand dollar bills and an additional $500—from William Fox, bankrupt movie magnate, as a bribe to rule in the latter's favor. Kaufman is accused of being a "go-between" for Davis and Fox in one of the two "deals."

In his opening address, Gahagan asserted the government would show the two defendants were involved "in a conspiracy to sell justice of the United States and to sell decisions in the United States court." Gahagan named five specific instances in which, he averred, justice was sold.

Berlin Ends Mystery Concerning Liner Belonging To Egyptians, Announcing Search In South Atlantic Ocean

NONE OF PASSENGERS INJURED

Craft Accused Of Carrying Contraband To Be Used By British And De Gaulle Free French In African District

WASHINGTON, May 20—The State Department today cabled American Charge D'Affairs Leland B. Morris at Berlin to request the German government for information concerning the whereabouts of American passengers taken off the Egyptian liner Zamzam.

BERLIN, May 20—The German government tore the veil of mystery from the fate of the Egyptian liner Zamzam today with announcement she had been halted, searched and sunk on the high seas and all aboard—including scores of Americans—rescued and taken prisoner.

A brief official statement accused the Zamzam of carrying contraband designed for the use of British forces and the so-called "Free French" detachments of General Charles De Gaulle in Africa.

Exact whereabouts of the 142 Americans who sailed from New York aboard the Zamzam for medical and ambulance service with the De Gaulle forces or as missionaries in darkest Africa were not known.

They, along with other passengers and all the members of the Zamzam's crew, were landed "somewhere in German-occupied territory."

Reliable information said that all aboard the Zamzam were landed at a "French port" and interned. Inasmuch as the term "German-occupied territory" was used, it was assumed that the port was in France itself, indicating that the raider succeeded in dodging the British blockade and had come back to Europe. There is no officially "German-occupied" territory in Africa.

Responsible quarters in Berlin expressed belief that American Red Cross attaches aboard the Zamzam would be regarded as a separate non-combatant unit and set free in due time. Their release, however, is expected to be delayed considerably while the process of "sorting" them from British citizens aboard the Zamzam is under way.

All of the Americans who sailed on the Zamzam are well, according to authentic quarters.

Sinking of the Zamzam recalled some of the exploits of the famed German sea raider Wolf in the World War days, which sank countless thousands of tons of enemy shipping and finally beat its way to a German port after the entire Reich had given the vessel and its crew up as lost.

German officials did not in any way identify the ship which sank the Zamzam as a prize of war, presumably somewhere in the South Atlantic.

(Editor's Note: Some months ago, reports said the German battleship Scharnhorst and Gneisenau were operating in the South Atlantic as sea raiders. Recently, however, the British Air Ministry has identified these ships as lying at dock in Brest—the constant targets of Royal Air Force bombers.)

NEW YORK, May 20—William V. C. Ruxton, president of the British-American Ambulance Corps, sent this message today to the parents of the 24 volunteer drivers who were aboard the steamer Zamzam: "Message just received from Berlin admits sinking of Zamzam but all passengers saved and captives in some German port in Africa."

Ships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau were operating in the South Atlantic as sea raiders. Recently, however, the British Air Ministry has identified these ships as lying at dock in Brest—the constant targets of Royal Air Force bombers.)

All in Nazi Territory
The German statement on the Zamzam said:
"All passengers and members of the crew of the Zamzam have been taken prisoner and landed somewhere in occupied territory."
"The ship was sunk after it had been searched for contraband designed for use of the De Gaulle (Continued on Page Seven)

U. S. CITIZENS WILL BE FREED, CAPITAL CLAIMS

WASHINGTON, May 20—State Department officials, awaiting official information regarding the German announcement of the sinking of the Egyptian liner Zamzam, expressed the opinion that the American passengers aboard probably would be released.

For the moment, department officials had only press reports before them regarding the German announcement which said the passengers and crew of the vessel had been landed on German-occupied territory after the vessel had been sunk by a surface raider.

While voicing the belief that the German government probably would release the American passengers, State Department spokesmen emphasized that this opinion is purely unofficial and that any official expression must await full study of the facts.

F. D. TO ABANDON CHANGE IN DATE OF THANKSGIVING

WASHINGTON, May 20—President Roosevelt confessed today that his experiment of advancing Thanksgiving Day one week has been a failure.

So far as the federal government is concerned, Mr. Roosevelt said, Thanksgiving again will be observed on its old date—the fourth Thursday in November—starting in 1942. It is too late to change the date this year and the holiday will be observed by the federal government and a large number of states on the third Thursday in November.

The President recalled that he set up the date one week to help the nation's merchants who complained that the proximity of Thanksgiving to Christmas hurt retail sales. Mr. Roosevelt hurt that advancing the date has not helped retail sales volume.

NONE OF PASSENGERS INJURED

Craft Accused Of Carrying Contraband To Be Used By British And De Gaulle Free French In African District

WASHINGTON, May 20—The State Department today cabled American Charge D'Affairs Leland B. Morris at Berlin to request the German government for information concerning the whereabouts of American passengers taken off the Egyptian liner Zamzam.

BERLIN, May 20—The German government tore the veil of mystery from the fate of the Egyptian liner Zamzam today with announcement she had been halted, searched and sunk on the high seas and all aboard—including scores of Americans—rescued and taken prisoner.

A brief official statement accused the Zamzam of carrying contraband designed for the use of British forces and the so-called "Free French" detachments of General Charles De Gaulle in Africa.

Exact whereabouts of the 142 Americans who sailed from New York aboard the Zamzam for medical and ambulance service with the De Gaulle forces or as missionaries in darkest Africa were not known.

They, along with other passengers and all the members of the Zamzam's crew, were landed "somewhere in German-occupied territory."

Reliable information said that all aboard the Zamzam were landed at a "French port" and interned. Inasmuch as the term "German-occupied territory" was used, it was assumed that the port was in France itself, indicating that the raider succeeded in dodging the British blockade and had come back to Europe. There is no officially "German-occupied" territory in Africa.

Responsible quarters in Berlin expressed belief that American Red Cross attaches aboard the Zamzam would be regarded as a separate non-combatant unit and set free in due time. Their release, however, is expected to be delayed considerably while the process of "sorting" them from British citizens aboard the Zamzam is under way.

All of the Americans who sailed on the Zamzam were well, according to authentic quarters.

Sinking of the Zamzam recalled some of the exploits of the famed German sea raider Wolf in the World War days, which sank countless thousands of tons of enemy shipping and finally beat its way to a German port after the entire Reich had given the vessel and its crew up as lost.

German officials did not in any way identify the ship which sank the Zamzam as a prize of war, presumably somewhere in the South Atlantic.

(Editor's Note: Some months ago, reports said the German battleship Bismarck had been sunk by the American battleship USS Maryland.)

NEW YORK, May 20—William V. C. Ruxton, president of the British-American Ambulance Corps, sent this message today to the parents of the 24 volunteer drivers who were aboard the steamer Zamzam:

"Message just received from Berlin admits sinking of Zamzam but all passengers saved and captives in some German port in Africa."

Tieships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau were operating in the South Atlantic as sea raiders. Recently, however, the British Air Ministry has identified these ships as lying at dock in Brest—the constant targets of Royal Air Force bombers.)

All in Nazi Territory

The German statement on the Zamzam said: "All passengers and members of the crew of the Zamzam have been taken prisoner and landed somewhere in occupied territory. The ship was sunk after it had been searched for contraband designed for use of the De Gaulle (Continued on Page Seven)

U. S. CITIZENS WILL BE FREED, CAPITAL CLAIMS

WASHINGTON, May 20—State Department officials, awaiting official information regarding the German announcement of the sinking of the Egyptian liner Zamzam, expressed the opinion that the American passengers aboard probably would be released.

For the moment, department officials had only press reports before them regarding the German announcement which said the passengers and crew of the vessel had been landed on German-occupied territory after the vessel had been sunk by a surface raider.

While voicing the belief that the German government probably would release the American passengers, State Department spokesmen emphasized that this opinion is purely unofficial and that any official expression must await full study of the facts.

DRAFT CHANGES TO BE DECIDED BY WAR OFFICE

Congressmen To Put Many Suggestions Up To Department

LOWER AGE IS URGED

Final Report Within Two Weeks Expected By May, Chairman

WASHINGTON, May 20—The War Department will be asked for a "full report of its views" on all proposed amendments to the Draft Act before congress acts on any of them, it was announced in the House today.

Rep. May (D) Ky., chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, said that he was compiling a list of suggested changes for submission to the department and predicted there would be no congressional action on the matter for at least several weeks.

Among the more important changes on which the department will be asked to express itself are: To lower the minimum age from 21 to 18; to take in boys just out of school allowing them to select the year they will serve; to make the act permanent; to lower the top age from 35 down to 30, 25, or 21; to eliminate the 900,000 limitation on the number of men and take in all boys of a certain age; to legislate for uniform deferments for married men; and to give the President power to order blanket deferments of the higher age groups.

The last proposal is the only one so far officially requested by Selective Service headquarters. In response to questions, the headquarters announced today that this was not devised to defer any older men already drafted, but only to exempt older men who have not yet been inducted.

May said that he expected to send the list to the department this week and anticipated receiving its report in two or three weeks after that. When this is received, he added, it will be referred to a subcommittee headed by Rep. Faddis (D) Pa., for a thorough study.

"I still don't see why they need any additional legislation at this time, but I want to find out just what the department does want," May declared.

"They're going to register another million 21 year old boys on July 1 and they can induct them any way they want."

PICKETS HALT WORK ON SHIPS AT LORAIN PORT

LORAIN, May 20—Picket lines today were in operation at the Lorain plant of the American Shipbuilding Co., where between 800 and 900 employees went out on an unexpected and an "unauthorized" strike yesterday afternoon.

The strike, which according to A. F. of L. headquarters was called by "the rank and file of the members" without authorization by union spokesmen, halted work on six naval vessels being built here by the government. All have been launched and are being completed in the water.

Seven A. F. of L. craft unions are involved in the dispute, including machinists, blacksmiths, pipefitters, painters, boilermakers, riveters and welders.

William H. Gerhauser, company president, claimed the walkout came without warning. The company, he added, had been negotiating with union representatives since April 1 to determine terms of a contract to replace one which expired April 15.

An employees' spokesman said the walkout could be attributed to the company's failure to give a written guarantee that pay increases resulting from negotiations would be retroactive to April 15.

VICHY, May 20—Official warnings that French will defend all sections of her empire and will seek to recover the African colonies now held by the forces of Gen. Charles De Gaulle were published by all Vichy newspapers today.

The statement, issued by the official Havas News Agency, was regarded as a direct warning that any American attempt to seize Dakar on the West African coast or the island of Martinique in the new world would meet with spirited French resistance.

As issued by Havas, the statement said:

"The hour probably has come for France to recover, notably in Africa, all her empire.

"The problem of dissidence is a problem to be arranged only between France and the dissidents.

Foreigners Warned
"France cannot permit any foreign power to intervene in order to prevent it."

At the Havas agency it was stated that the note was "official" but its specific origin was not disclosed.

As a result, some circles in Vichy were inclined to wait for an official statement issued directly by the government before leaping to conclusions regarding the exact policies of the Petain regime under the present European circumstances.

(Editor's Note: The British radio, in a broadcast heard by NBC, said the "Free French" forces of Gen. De Gaulle are taking action with the British against the French colonial army in Syria which is taking orders from Vichy.

(According to this broadcast the "Free French" group took an active part in British air raids against the Rayak airdrome in Syria yesterday.

(In Berlin authorized German quarters said a German communiqué will be issued today defining the current Franco-German situation. It was stated there may be further easing of armistice regulations, but a report that Paris would be restored as the French capital was denied.)

EARNED INVITATION

Jay C. Flippen has a double header to his credit! At least he has as far as Walter Compton is concerned. Flippen will make his second appearance on "Double or Nothing" Friday at 7 p. m.

Not long ago the genial emcee doubled for Walter on the quiz show when the quiz-vizard was obliged to skip a broadcast because of illness.

Walter, being a perfect host, invited "Flip" back for a guest appearance, which the latter accepted. Now the smooth-tongued master of ceremonies will have to fence verbally with colleague Walter, who won't "spare the rod."

RADIO BRIEFS

Since the New York critics picked his starring play, "Watch on the Rhine" as the hit of the season, Paul Lukas has been kept increasingly busy before the microphone. His last appearance was on the Kate Smith Hour Friday but he's still set for numerous guest leads on the "Inner Sanctum Mystery" programs carrying him through the summer on the Sunday night chiller.

Eddie Cantor, with much movie work to talk about, will probably head back for the west coast in several weeks. He has had a long stand in New York with his "Time to Smile" broadcasts which will continue when he returns to Hollywood.

An interesting program scheduled for Sunday is called "What Writers in America Can Do For Freedom," a symposium at the University of California. Chairman will be Thomas Freebairn Smith and writers participating include James Hilton, Marc Connelly, Preston Sturges, S. N. Behrman, J. P. Marquand and True Boardman.

BOY, 7, ORDERED INTO COURT FOR SPEEDY DRIVING

CHICAGO, May 20 — A seven-year-old boy, his father and mother, and his cousin were ordered to appear in Chicago juvenile court today to explain how the youngster happened to be found driving the cousin's automobile at a 65-mile-an-hour clip in suburban Des Plaines.

The boy, Arthur Koester Jr., was at the wheel of a car owned by his cousin, Dr. Louise Koester, when a truck driver curbed the machine. The truck driver said the car was speeding at 65 miles an hour and he thought it was driverless because Arthur's head did not show above the door window.

Riding with Arthur at the time was his five-year-old brother, Johnny. Johnny proudly told police that at one time during the ride, we went 80."

Authorities said that after questioning Dr. Koester, and Arthur's parents, these facts were learned: Dr. Koester taught Arthur to drive a year ago after he had gotten into the habit of accompanying her on calls. But, Dr. Koester said, Arthur had strict orders never to take the car out alone.

100,000 BACK AT WORK IN MINES, RESULT OF PACT

NEW YORK, May 20—Over 100,000 miners in the hard coal fields of Pennsylvania returned to work in the pits today following the initialing of an agreement between the CIO's United Mine Workers and anthracite operators calling for wage increases and vacation payments.

With the adjustment of the hard coal controversy out of the way after a one-day work stoppage, UMW officials and representatives of the southern and northern bituminous operators resumed conferences today in an effort to break the wage deadlock in the soft coal negotiations.

If no agreement is reached by Thursday the soft coal conferees will go to Washington to meet Friday with William H. Davis of the National Defense Mediation Board. The union's policy committee has withheld its vote on the question of a stoppage in the Appalachian mines pending outcome of current negotiations.

The hard coal agreement, initialled last night, will not be formally signed until the union membership has approved by referendum. Terms of the agreement, retroactive to May 1, which will run for two years, are:

An increase of 7½ percent on all day and contract rates from May 1 to October 1 and 10 percent thereafter until the expiration of the agreement.

The rescue took place high over the Pacific Ocean thirty minutes after Osipoff's parachute got caught in the plane from which he leaped.

EARNED INVITATION

Jay C. Flippen has a double header to his credit! At least he has as far as Walter Compton is concerned. Flippen will make his second appearance on "Double or Nothing" Friday at 7 p. m.

Not long ago the genial emcee doubled for Walter on the quiz show when the quiz-vizard was obliged to skip a broadcast because of illness.

RADIO BRIEFS

Since the New York critics picked his starring play, "Watch on the Rhine" as the hit of the season, Paul Lukas has been kept increasingly busy before the microphone. His last appearance was on the Kate Smith Hour Friday but he's still set for numerous guest leads on the "Inner Sanctum Mystery" programs carrying him through the summer on the Sunday night chiller.

Eddie Cantor, with much movie work to talk about, will probably head back for the west coast in several weeks. He has had a long stand in New York with his "Time to Smile" broadcasts which will continue when he returns to Hollywood.

An interesting program scheduled for Sunday is called "What Writers in America Can Do For Freedom," a symposium at the University of California. Chairman will be Thomas Freebairn Smith and writers participating include James Hilton, Marc Connelly, Preston Sturges, S. N. Behrman, J. P. Marquand and True Boardman.

BOY, 7, ORDERED INTO COURT FOR SPEEDY DRIVING

CHICAGO, May 20 — A seven-year-old boy, his father and mother, and his cousin were ordered to appear in Chicago juvenile court today to explain how the youngster happened to be found driving the cousin's automobile at a 65-mile-an-hour clip in suburban Des Plaines.

The boy, Arthur Koester Jr., was at the wheel of a car owned by his cousin, Dr. Louise Koester, when a truck driver curbed the machine. The truck driver said the car was speeding at 65 miles an hour and he thought it was driverless because Arthur's head did not show above the door window.

Riding with Arthur at the time was his five-year-old brother, Johnny. Johnny proudly told police that at one time during the ride, we went 80."

Authorities said that after questioning Dr. Koester, and Arthur's parents, these facts were learned:

Dr. Koester taught Arthur to drive a year ago after he had gotten into the habit of accompanying her on calls. But, Dr. Koester said, Arthur had strict orders never to take the car out alone.

100,000 BACK AT WORK IN MINES, RESULT OF PACT

NEW YORK, May 20—Over 100,000 miners in the hard coal fields of Pennsylvania returned to work in the pits today following the initialing of an agreement between the CIO's United Mine Workers and anthracite operators calling for wage increases and vacation payments.

With the adjustment of the hard coal controversy out of the way after a one-day work stoppage, UMW officials and representatives of the southern and northern bituminous operators resumed conferences today in an effort to break the wage deadlock in the soft coal negotiations.

If no agreement is reached by Thursday the soft coal conferees will go to Washington to meet Friday with William H. Davis of the National Defense Mediation Board. The union's policy committee has withheld its vote on the question of a stoppage in the Appalachian mines pending outcome of current negotiations.

The hard coal agreement, initialled last night, will not be formally signed until the union membership has approved by referendum. Terms of the agreement, retroactive to May 1, which will run for two years, are:

An increase of 7½ percent on all day and contract rates from May 1 to October 1 and 10 percent thereafter until the expiration of the agreement.

Saw Fly Larvae And Sod Webworms Threatening Pickaway Area

SOME BEING RESEED

Few Days Of Warm Weather Needed To End Threat, Blair Declares

Saw fly larvae and sod webworms are threatening to destroy Pickaway County wheat and corn fields and have caused farmers in some sections to plow up and reseed their fields.

County Agent F. K. Blair said Tuesday that several farmers in the Jackson and Muhlenberg Township area told him that whole sections of their fields were being destroyed.

T. H. Parker, extension entomologist from Ohio State University, was in the county Monday afternoon checking various fields where the damage Monday afternoon checking various fields where the damage was reported worst. Wheat fields are being attacked by the saw fly larvae, Mr. Parker told County Agent Blair.

The saw fly larvae, which resembles the army worm in appearance but is less destructive, chews the stems of wheat and small clover. A few days of warm weather will cause the larvae to transform into the pupa stage and thus end the trouble, the entomologist said.

Sod webworms are attacking corn fields in wide sections of the county, Mr. Blair said. Sod webworms are small active worms that live in a webbed retreat in the soil at the base of the plant and devour leaves and cut stems of corn or small clover plants. For small patches of corn or clover, farmers can dig out and destroy the worms when injuries appear. Plants may be replaced in the rows without destroying the old plants. If the first planting has been destroyed, farmers should delay replanting. Partial control may be secured by applying poisoned mash bait, substituting corn meal for bran in the mash.

Cutworms also are causing damage to many crops, farmers report. A poisoned bran mash scattered lightly over the field will help to destroy the worms, Mr. Blair said.

AAA OFFICIALS TO STUDY CROP MARKET QUOTAS

Final arrangements for a vote on wheat marketing quotas on May 31 will be made Thursday when community committeemen meet with county AAA committeemen in Betz Restaurant.

The meeting Thursday will follow a district meeting Wednesday at Lancaster, where county AAA officials will be instructed concerning the vote.

According to State AAA Chairman Elmer Kruse every farmer in Ohio who raises 200 or more bushels of wheat a year is eligible to vote on the quotas. To place wheat marketing quotas in effect, two-thirds of those voting must approve. If a negative vote is recorded, no marketing quota will be in effect and no federal loans could be made on wheat during the marketing year beginning July 1.

War Planes of Tomorrow to Surpass Today's Wonders

Formation of Republic P-35 United States army pursuit planes streaks across the sky. Sketch shows development of the airplane during the past three years.

By D. G. Sandra
DAYTON, O., May 20—At Wright Field they are working on the airplane of tomorrow and the day after tomorrow.

From odd bits of information here and there, tomorrow's fighter plane promises to outfly existing types by 50 to 75 miles per hour; trimmer, smaller, more maneuverable, and with superior armament, it will require the utmost skill and concentration from the pilot who will sit in a tight cockpit and speak to the enemy in sheets of staccato fire.

In bombers, the drift toward aerial dreadnaughts stresses tonnage. The 40,000-pound "Flying Fortress" has already given way to the 140,000-pound Douglas B-19, recently completed, and more than three times larger than the "Fortress," but at Wright Field a 200,000-pound flying dreadnaught with more powerful engines, heavier armament, and 10,000-mile range, has been laid out in drawings. The first nation to build 10,000-mile bombers, says General H. H. Arnold, chief of the air corps, will win the ultimate victory.

Again looking ahead: Airplane power plants will jump from the existing 2,200-horsepower engines to units developing 4,000 to 8,000 horsepower. All multi-engine military craft will have sealed pressure cabins, because today's stratosphere flying is moving steadily toward the stratosphere, above 30,000 feet.

Air Industry's Brains
When Defense Production Director William S. Knudsen called for 33,000 war planes by the end of 1941, he had an eye cocked at Wright Field, where a group of experts have been diverted to a study of industrial engineering, with a view to accelerating mass-production of aircraft.

In addition to carrying on tests and experiments, the material division prepared recommendations for contracts covering those large orders that keep airplane factories humming. Even after planes are delivered to United States military flyers, their major servicing is handled by the nine air corps depots scattered over the United States and territorial possessions.

Most interesting of the new experimental buildings is that housing a $2,500,000 400-mile-an-hour wind tunnel, about completed. Two 40-foot fans driven by a 40,000-horsepower motor will drive a terrific air blast through the 790-foot steel-lined wind chamber, making it possible to give exacting tests to full-size propellers, engine nacelles, and model airplanes with a wing spread up to 50 feet. Engineers anticipate more accurate data than was possible at slower air speeds.

Tests at Wright Field
Slashing pursuit ships like the Curtiss P-40, the Bell Airacobra P-39, the Lockheed twin-engine P-38, and the Republic P-41 all won spurs at Wright Field.

Here, too, the test pilots placed a seal of approval on the Boeing "Flying Fortress," and now they are flying the Consolidated XB-24.

24, newest of the four-engine bombers ordered in quantity. And before many days, the huge shadow of the 140,000-pound B-19, largest airplane in the world, will cross Wright Field as test pilots worry her for vital performance secrets.

At one stop in my tour of Wright Field, Major George Goddard, the air corps' safety valve in photography, exhibited and demonstrated some of his hobbies. First he showed how a United States military observer can photograph an enemy scene, develop his negative in 60 seconds, add 15 minutes more for rinse, and within five minutes toss the picture out of the plane at headquarters. The metal container has a rubber bumper, "so it won't hurt the general if it hits him."

From blitz photography, Major Goddard turned to a scale model and showed how air corps observers can map terrain photographs.

cally at night. The military map-maker uses a "gyrocamera," which keeps his apparatus parallel to the ground, no matter what the position of the plane or how bumpy the air.

At the proper moment, the photographer releases a series of magnesium bombs which fall at regular intervals and explode with intense incandescence about 1,500 feet after release.

The bright light activates a photoelectric cell in the plane, which automatically trips the camera shutter and brings up the next film for exposure. The magnesium flares cause a series of accurate photographs to be taken in the proper sequence for a photo-mosaic map.

Night Mosaic Map
Major Goddard exhibited the first night mosaic photo map ever made by this method and it revealed striking quality of detail. It took the air corps 16 years to perfect the necessary apparatus and techniques for this remarkable development.

In an aside Major Goddard remarked that, fortunately, light travels faster than sound. The picture is snapped before a concussion from the magnesium bomb jolts the photo plane with "an elephant's kick"; in one mapping operation, the pilot and photographer are apt to receive 30 such wallops.

Persistent queries result in little satisfaction from air corps officers regarding the most guarded military secret in the world—the new United States' bomb sight.

Bomb Sight's Accuracy
The typical answer to a simple question like, "How much does the bomb sight cost?" is "What bomb sight? Never heard of it." But at Langley Field, Virginia, I observed the devastating accuracy of this gadget that has filled foreign military circles with speculation and rumor.

Mounted on a 12-foot wheeled platform, the bomb sight was operated by an officer whose eyes were fixed on what might have been a screen or eye-piece. On the smooth concrete floor below were scattered toy models of battleships, each four or five inches in length. As the platform moved about, the officer would release a toy bomb from a height of about four feet. Invariably it struck a toy battleship amidships.

Far from being a toy, the bomb sight did as well in a bomber flying 8,000 feet above Langley Field. Aimed at a circle 100 feet in diameter, five test bombs were dropped from this altitude. Two struck the center of the circle and there hit near the rim, but all fell within the target.

Interested parties may as well know that every bomb sight is numbered and an accurate log is kept of its whereabouts every minute of the day and night. Nothing less than a regiment of men armed to the teeth could penetrate the defense system surrounding the safes where bomb sights are kept when not in use.

One parting question, please Colonel, "Did the government lend the bomb sight to England?"

In amused surprise, the colonel replied: "What bomb sight? Never heard of it—never heard of it."

Village council with all the force present, was in session Monday evening. Paid bills amounting to $221.10, purchased for $360 a 365-gallon, rubber tired, tar heating wagon with sprayer attachment, a much better tool than the old one in use for years.

The Ashville-Harrison board of education was in session at the school office with members present except Benford Millar. Paid bills and placed insurance policy renewals with local agency, Kuhn and Kuhn and that of Wilbur Griffith, Walnut Township. Amount of policies, $100,000 on building and $8000 on contents and equipment. This evening is commencement exercises, a class of 26 receiving diplomas of graduation.

The tiny ones in Grade One and Two, thought too young and short to make a trip to the Zoo, are happy, very much so, for the reason that their teachers, the Misses LeMay and Kuhn along with some other kindly disposed persons, are seeing to it that these youngsters make the trip and be properly cared for. Wednesday, is, to them, the big day. This will complete the list of the grade pupils seeing the zoo with the single exception of Grade Five and yet a way may be provided for them.

Fred Curry and his force of helpers are doing a good job of cement sidewalk repairing at central Main Street. Much other work of this repair kind is to receive attention.

Andrew Ward, a member of the naval reserves for the last two years, has been called to duty. Received his uniform and other equipment Monday and is off for Chicago and a ship today, 85 others have been called, he said.

Later on, you may find you can repay your loan faster and reduce costs to a minimum. And that's your privilege at any time. But there's no time like the present to work out your own budget on this thrifty loan basis. So let's talk it over. We know we can help you.

"GIVE YOURSELF A RAISE"

It's just like a raise in pay when you can cut expenses and have more money for yourself each month.

Take a loan of $350, for example. Then pay off all your scattered obligations. $18 a month is all you pay, averaged over, say, 25 months. What a saving that means!

Later on, you may find you can repay your loan faster and reduce costs to a minimum. And that's your privilege at any time. But there's no time like the present to work out your own budget on this thrifty loan basis. So let's talk it over. We know we can help you.

ALEXANDER AND ADOLF
THE Nazi war, spreading eastward like a vast prairie fire, enters a new phase—a romantic one, if you can forget the terror that marches with Hitler and the menace it offers for mankind.

The Fuehrer is embarking on the path that Alexander the Great pursued 22 centuries ago. Instead of the Macedonian phalanx—a flying wedge of troops bearing long spears—this new conqueror has steel-clad panzer divisions bearing cannon, and winged furies overhead hurling powerful explosives. One unit of Hitler's army could have annihilated Alexander's world-conqueror's before breakfast.

And how far will Hitler's formidable armies go, on this eastward thrust? Through the Near East, taking Armenia and Turkey and Palestine and Iraq and Iran and Arabia in their stride? And Egypt, the prey of conquerors for many thousand years? And ancient, mystical India?

No one knows, not even Hitler.
But any well-informed Briton or American could tell him that in such an oriental adventure he may be wasting his time. An Alexandrian conquest will not destroy the British Empire. And the crucial battle of this great war will be not on land but on the sea—the Battle of the Atlantic, which if we hurry will be won by Britain and America.

HELPLESS ABOUT WEEDS
GETTING rid of weeds—and particularly that menace to hay fever sufferers, ragweed—in and around big cities isn't as easy as it appears. Sometimes ordinances are passed requiring property-owners to cut their weeds or pay a fine of $25 and costs. What happens?

Inspectors then discover that owners of small places cut their weeds down anyhow, because they usually live near by and don't like the weeds' unsightliness. Owners of larger pieces of vacant property don't cut down the weeds because they aren't around to see them or suffer from them and don't intend to spend the money to have them cut. Mostly the inspectors can't locate these people.

Such a city then sends out city mowers with the idea of having them cut the weeds and getting the owners—when found—to foot the bill. It doesn't work. The city mowers cut only a swath about three feet back from the sidewalk, leaving the more remote areas of the property as rank with weeds as ever.

So it goes. No scheme works. The weeds thrive and multiply, and the sneezers sneeze increasingly.

This is one of those little problems a democracy is slow to handle efficiently. No doubt a dictator would either use the weeds in some war-making capacity, which would get them out of the way, or he would convert the weedy places into concentration camps for all opponents.

Otherwise they all could be placed in the wide open spaces of the West. Yes, there is still plenty of space out there. Land to be had for $10 an acre or less. LEAHY WARNED U. S.

WASHINGTON—The French capitulation to Hitler was no news to U. S. Ambassador Admiral Leahy. He had warned what was coming for some time. France's capitulation was news, however, to some of the kid-glove diplomats of the State Department who kept on sending food ships with the idea France could be bought off.

To understand fully the hopelessness of the French situation, it is necessary to remember that Marshall Petain belongs to the old school which favored the French royalty and disliked everything connected with the French Revolution. Petain never liked England, because England was always setting an example to the French people of how a parliamentary system really could be made to work.

Petaim and his school—which included Weygand—were dead set against the parliamentary system for any country, and felt that if the British system collapsed, then they would have no trouble ditching the democratic form of government in France.

In addition, Petaim was a pessimist. He did not think France could win last June; just as he did not think France could win in March of 1918. His order issued on March 24, 1918, has now been published; and if it had been carried out it would have meant French surrender to Germany. Fortunately for the outcome of the last war, Marshal Foch stepped in at this moment and stopped the German army at the gates of Amiens.

DON'T UNDERSTAND U. S.

There is still another reason why Petain and those around him are not anxious to see the British win. British victory means an investigation of the French General Staff during the past decade, and the reasons for French defeat at a time when France was supposed to have the finest army in the world.

Finally, those in power inside the French Government seem to be hopelessly uninformed regarding the situation in the United States. For instance, Admiral Darlan remarked to a member of the French Embassy, just before he left Vichy for Washington one month ago: "One of the most important developments of recent months is the increasing rivalry between Great Britain and the United States."

And Marshal Weygand remarked to an American diplomat rather recently: "America is a mercantile nation. She never will be interested in helping Great Britain."

Apparently the leaders of France had no idea that there is even a remote possi-

Another instance is related by Charles S. Craik in his book called My Twin Joe (Country Life Press, New York). These two boys answered questions on examination papers identically in spite of the fact that the teacher separated them by the whole width of the room. One teacher, despairing of preventing this kind of communication, held a Latin examination and put Joe in the office of the principal and kept Joe's twin in the teacher's own office. Joe was given the questions but did not begin to answer them.

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

BROOKS and Natalie received the news of Powell's visit with the expected excitement and approval. Mrs. Edmonds was looking along the beach down which June and Donald must come. The morning get-together, when the mail boat came in, was a regular rite, and she was curious for a first glimpse of June and Donald.

But she was doomed to disappointment, for they did not come. Of course she had no way of peering into the cottage and seeing what was transpiring.

June awoke with the splitting headache that is a traditional part of the morning after. For a while she lay quite still, her mind going back over the day before when, publicly, Donald had all but thrown her out of his life; when he had assured the newspaper men that she was resuming her career. She recalled the scene that had followed—with Brooks. Their trip to the mainland and all the rest of it was quite clear. Coming home in the after-midnight hours was not so clear. Dimly, she seemed to remember seeing and talking to Donald, but she couldn't be certain about that.

The door opened and she sat bolt upright, wincing a little with pain at the sudden movement. Donald grinned at her above the tray he was carrying. "Careful, or it'll blow off," he cautioned her.

"What will?" she asked faintly. "Your head, angel. Feels a little like a loon, doesn't it?" said Donald, wagging his own head solemnly. "I know by sad experience—but here, this will help. Swallow it right down. I know it smells terrible and tastes worse, but you'll be amazed at the way it'll make you feel. And don't ask me what's in it. It's my own concoction—achieved after years of experimenting with the other fellow."

He went on talking while she gulped the evil-smelling mixture. A little later, to her own amazement, she found that her headache had lessened a little and her stomach no longer seemed going around in circles.

"And now this," said Donald, handing her a glass of iced tomato juice. "Nothing ever tasted so good before," she admitted humbly, as she drank it.

"Feeling better?" asked Donald tenderly.

"Ever so much better!" she acknowledged gratefully.

There was a glint in Donald's eye and his voice was unexpectedly sharp. "Then maybe you'll tell me what you mean by such carryings-on? Out until all hours! If you yearned to go out stepping, why the blazes didn't you tell ME and let ME go along?"

June blinked at the sudden change in his tone and his manner. "I didn't think you'd care about it. I mean—you seemed to be chiefly anxious to get rid of me—" She swallowed and fought back the tears that threatened her.

"That's because I'm such an utter, double-standed fool—didn't you know?" said Donald promptly. "I thought I had to give you up because of your heaven-sent genius, which I had no right to chain to a kitchen stove. I forgot that you were a woman as well as a great artist. And it never occurred to me, like the fool I am, that maybe you'd rather be a woman than a genius."

"I would, darling. Oh, I would, I would," she told him breathlessly. "That's what Natalie said—" June felt as though he had thrown the iced tomato juice in her face. She stared at him, shrinking a little, and then she stammered faintly, "Natalie said that?"

Donald grinned. "Well, if you go stepping with her husband—wasn't it all right for me to listen to words of wisdom from her?" he pointed out. "She told me a few simple home-truths—" "What does she know about—us?" demanded June hotly.

"You'd be surprised," said Donald. "It seems her husband's not entirely rational, either. It seems he's been going around with a bee in his bonnet to the effect that no girl as rich as she is can afford anything so simple and unfashionable as love. She's been trying to convince him she's human, if rich—and without much success. So when I came along and stuck my neck out about having no right to chain your genius to the humdrum task of being a newspaper man's wife, she hit the ceiling. Too bad Brooks couldn't have heard her. It might have opened his eyes quite a bit."

"The important thing is—did it open YOURS?" "And how!" said Donald. "Look, darling—I'm nobody much and I never will be. But such as I am and such as I can make myself—do you want me? Because if you do, I'm at your feet for the rest of my life."

Her husband, Peter Noggle, of Walnut Township was given the entirety of the estate of the late Anna E. Noggle, according to the will filed in probate court.

SPLENDID opportunities for advancing upon ambitious objectives should be indicated by this day's astral influences. It may be a time for seeking power, growth, expansion of interests, credit and finances with the assurance of surprising support from those in prestige and authority. There may be various angles of the unexpected in this direction, with new projects under excellent prospect of cooperation and approbation. But be wary as to schemes, deception and intrigues of a dubious nature. Work for public or community advantage. Unlooked-for changes are imminent. Exercise prudence and thrift with funds.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of exceptional opportunities for reaching high goals of power, ambition and perhaps public or social recognition or preferment. Such may involve unforeseen changes, but in all ventures beware of fraud, subtlety, intrigues and other glamorous or seductive schemes or entanglements. Also be conservative with investments; avoid a lavish use of funds either in business or personal indulgences.

A child born on this day should have much originality, independence and broad ambitions, with a generous, kindly and cordial nature perhaps easily duped or imposed upon.

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

BROOKS AND Natalie received the news of Powell's visit with the expected excitement and approval. Mrs. Edmonds was looking along the beach down which June and Donald must come. The morning get-together, when the mail boat came in, was a regular rite, and she was curious for a first glimpse of June and Donald.

But she was doomed to disappointment, for they did not come. Of course she had no way of peeking into the cottage and seeing what was transpiring.

June awoke with the splitting headache that is a traditional part of the morning after. For a while she lay quite still, her mind going back over the day before when, publicly, Donald had all but thrown her out of his life; when he had assured the newspaper men that she was resuming her career. She recalled the scene that had followed—with Brooks. Their trip to the mainland and all the rest of it was quite clear. Coming home in the after-midnight hours was not so clear. Dimly, she seemed to remember seeing and talking to Donald, but she couldn't be certain about that.

The door opened and she sat bolt upright, wincing a little with pain at the sudden movement.

Donald grinned at her above the tray he was carrying.

"Careful, or it'll blow off," he cautioned her.

"What will?" she asked faintly.

"Your head, angel. Feels a little like a loon, doesn't it?" said Donald, wagging his own head solemnly. "I know by sad experience—but here, this will help. Swallow it right down. I know it smells terrible and tastes worse, but you'll be amazed at the way it'll make you feel. And don't ask me what's in it. It's my own concoction—achieved after years of experimenting with the other fellow."

He went on talking while she gulped the evil-smelling mixture. A little later, to her own amazement, she found that her headache had lessened a little and her stomach no longer seemed going around in circles.

"And now this," said Donald, handing her a glass of iced tomato juice.

"Nothing ever tasted so good before," she admitted humbly, as she drank it.

"Feeling better?" asked Donald tenderly.

"Ever so much better!" she acknowledged gratefully.

There was a glint in Donald's eye and his voice was unexpectedly sharp. "Then maybe you'll tell me what you mean by such carryings-on? Out until all hours? If you yearned to go out stepping, why the blazes didn't you tell ME and let ME go along?"

June blinked at the sudden change in his tone and his manner. "I didn't think you'd care about it. I mean—you seemed to be chiefly anxious to get rid of me—" She swallowed and fought back the tears that threatened her.

"That's because I'm such an utter, double-starred fool—didn't you know?" said Donald promptly. "I thought I had to give you up because of your heaven-sent genius, which I had no right to chain to a kitchen stove. I forgot that you were a woman as well as a great artist. And it never occurred to me, like the fool I am, that maybe you'd rather be a woman than a genius."

"I would, darling. Oh, I would. I would," she told him breathlessly. "That's what Natalie said—"

June felt as though he had thrown the iced tomato juice in her face. She stared at him, shrinking a little, and then she stammered faintly, "Natalie said that?"

Donald grinned. "Well, if you go stepping with her husband—wasn't it all right for me to listen to words of wisdom from her?" he pointed out. "She told me a few simple home-truths—"

"What does she know about—us?" demanded June hotly.

"You'd be surprised," said Donald. "It seems her husband's not entirely rational, either. It seems he's been going around with a bee in his bonnet to the effect that no girl as rich as she is can afford anything so simple and unfashionable as love. She's been trying to convince him she's human, if rich— and without much success. So when I came along and stuck my neck out about having no right to chain your genius to the humdrum task of being a newspaper man's wife, she hit the ceiling. Too bad Brooks couldn't have heard her. It might have opened his eyes quite a bit."

"The important thing is—did it open YOURS?"

"And how!" said Donald. "Look, darling—I'm nobody much and I never will be. But such as I am and such as I can make myself—do you want me? Because if you do, I'm at your feet for the rest of my life."

June was radiant. "That's a silly place to be," she told him shakily and held out her arms.

A few days later they all had met at the pier for the distribution of the morning mail. There were several letters, also a telegram for Natalie. When she had read it, she looked up swiftly, her eyes sweeping about the little group.

"Let's all go places," she suggested eagerly. "I've got a telegram here. The Sea Sprite is at Tampa. Let's have it pick us up and run us over to Havana for a few days. Will you come, all of you? A sort of 'grand splash' to wind up our honeymoon here?"

Terry gave a little whoop of delight.

"Will we? Oh, Bill, we're going some place on a yacht!" she shrieked like an excited child.

"I take it, Bill, that you and the child-bride accept," said Brooks, grinning.

"I think it would be safe to assume as much," Bill answered.

"Betsy?" asked Natalie eagerly. "You and Tom will come?"

"I'd love it," answered Betsy happily, and Tom nodded his smiling agreement.

June and Donald, Major and Mrs. Edmonds, all agreed. Tom and Brooks departed for the mainland to wire the yacht and make their plans. They were all to discover how very smoothly plans can move when aided by tremendous amounts of money. It seemed scarcely more than a breathing space before the Sea Sprite, a slim and shining white lady of the seas, dipped her anchor just off the island and they were all going abroad.

Terry, tumbling into the speedboat to go out to the yacht, surveyed her sunburned legs and arms, revealed by the extreme brevity of one of her chambray play-suits, and sighed.

"I hate to think what it's going to be like, having to wear clothes again."

Bill grinned. "If women's clothes go on shrinking at the top and bottom and in between, as they've been doing for the last couple of years, you won't have to worry much, angel. I only hope these fading old eyes will be able to endure the strain."

The others laughed and the speedboat dashed away from the pier as though it, too, was eager to reach the gleaming white yacht.

Cards on Top; Vandy Wins

St. Louis Takes Lead As Dodgers Fail; McKechnie To Use Thompson Against Braves; Indians, Yanks Lose

Steadily climbing, the St. Louis Cardinals today stood on the top rung of the National League ladder and left it to the rest to catch them.

They hit the top yesterday without leaving their hotel room. Idle in keeping with the schedule, the Cards advanced to first place when the Brooklyn Dodgers lost to the Chicago Cubs by 14 to 1. That's right—14 to 1. And it probably will still stick despite a protest by Manager Leo Durocher of the losers. He protested that game and the one of Sunday on the grounds that the Cubs' roster included 26 men instead of the stipulated 25 for this point of the season.

The Dodgers lost by virtue of a nine run second inning, which included a home run by Claude Passeau with the bases loaded. Thus the latter contributed to his own victory as the Cub pitcher and he allowed only four hits, being deprived of a shutout by Babe Phelps' homer.

Vandy on Mound
The Cincinnati Reds pounded out 14 hits to down the Boston Braves by 7 to 3, Johnny Vander Meer scoring his third victory of the year.

A fifth-inning four-run outburst, on four hits and two Braves' miscues, put Cincinnati ahead, a lead that was never relinquished. Single runs were added by the Redlegs in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings.

Vander Meer was yanked in the ninth with none out after Carvel Rowell hit a home run for the Braves. Max West had touched Vander Meer for a four-bagger in the previous inning. Joe Beggs finished without allowing a Brave to reach first base.

Five of the Redlegs got two hits each. They were Ernie Koy, Aleno, Lombardi, Eddie Joost and Vander Meer himself.

Manager Bill McKechnie indicated he would send Junior Thompson to the mound for the Reds today to face Erickson of the Braves.

The Pittsburgh Pirates beat the New York Giants, 2 to 1, as Max Butcher turned in a four-hitter against Carl Hubbell's six-hitter.

Galehouse Halts Yanks
In the American League, the St. Louis Browns banged their way to a 5 to 1 victory over the New York Yankees. Denny Galehouse thus scored his third victory for the Browns with the aid of errors by Gordon and Crosetti.

But the league-leading Indians also went down to defeat again, losing to the Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 4. Less McCrabb, rookie righthander, scored the victory.

The Detroit Tigers scored their fifth straight win, beating the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 2, behind the four-hit hurling of Johnny Gorman.

The second place Chicago White Sox capitalized on the wildness of Vernon Kennedy to down the Washington Senators, 8 to 2.

Massillon Fans Claim Gillom Is Greatest; He'll Enter Ohio State

By Jerry Bronfield
MASSILLON, May 20—There'll never be another Gillom.

That was the mournful and all-too definite verdict of Massillon sports followers today as they await the graduation from Washington High School of the boy who is regarded as the greatest all-around athlete ever to come out of this hot-bed of scholastic sports.

Some, not quite as conservative, insist Horace Gillom is the greatest athlete in Ohio high school sports annals.

That, of course, is quite a statement, but there is much evidence to substantiate it.

When the big colored boy graduates June 12 he leaves behind him a list of accomplishments that had the biggest colleges in the country clamoring for his services.

Standing 6 feet, 2 inches and weighing 195 pounds, Gillom has perfect physical proportions. Combine his size with cat-like grace, coordination and speed and you have the perfect athlete.

Entering Washington High School from Longfellow Junior High School, where much of the Tigers' athletic talent is spawned, Gillom was a great end in football for three years, making all-Ohi in his junior and senior years.

Kicks 60 Yards
He punted 60 yards, backed up the line, carried the ball brilliantly on end-around plays. He made the all-Ohio basketball team as a junior, and led the Tigers in scoring for two years.

In track he performed brilliantly in the 100 and the low hurdles. Never did Gillom play in a losing football game during his high school career. He was one of the Tigers' leading scorers. As a pass receiver he was virtually unstoppable.

Paul Brown, new grid coach of Ohio State who developed Gillom, described him as a "wildcat" when it comes to competitive spirit.

An average student who not once was an eligibility problem, Gillom this fall will follow Brown to Columbus, where he intends to major in physical education.

Gillom's departure from Massillon is a cause celebre in Canton, Steubenville, Alliance and other spots where he made a shambles of the opposition.

From now on, they figure, the worry belongs to Michigan, Northwestern, Illinois, et al.

THE HERO AND THE GOAT
The Hero—Claude Passeau, who held the Dodgers to four hits while the Cubs pushed Brooklyn out of first place, 14 to 1.

The Goat—Vernon Kennedy, who was sent to the showers in the seventh inning of his debut with the Senators after walking seven and hitting one batter, enabling the White Sox to win, 8 to 2.

PETEY SCALZO WINS
MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 20—Petey Scalzo of New York, NBA featherweight champion, successfully defended his title in Milwaukee Auditorium last night against Phil Zwick of Kaukauna, Wis., in the first 15-round bout ever staged in Wisconsin. Eight thousand fans, Milwaukee's biggest fight crowd in years, saw Scalzo outpoint the 35-year-old Wisconsin challenger by taking complete command of the infighting.

FOR MALE STUDENTS ONLY
HANOVER, N. M.—Because of its masculinity Dartmouth College came into a $500,000 endowment fund. The late Emil Bommer, Brooklyn, N. Y., manufacturer, in his will stated that the $500,000 trust fund be used for the education of male students only... and that it cannot be used for the "so-called dead languages" or for the maintenance of competitive athletics. Bommer who died in 1935 had no connection with Dartmouth but became impressed with the college when seeking a completely masculine institution to which to leave his residuary estate.

Faith in a great expanse of ocean as a barrier to enemies is a sort of Maginot-mindedness that afflicts too many Americans today.

SCHOOLBOYS TO SEEK OHIO TITLE

Runners, Golfers, Baseball Players To Compete At University

By Larry Newman
COLUMBUS May 20—Hundreds of high school athletes—from burly shot put artists to lithe putters of the golf links—will swarm into Ohio Stadium Friday and Saturday for the final act in the 1940-41 scholastic athletic drama.

The grand finale will feature the awarding of the Buckeye schoolboy crowns to the best baseball, track and golf teams in the state and the best artists of the tennis courts who started the long grind to the state championship several weeks ago along with 20,000 other high school athletes.

Defending champions will be back in nearly every event in an attempt to withstand the withering fire of the challengers. Columbus North and Powhatan Point, Class "A" and "B" baseball titlists last spring, have survived district diamond competition for a second term while Cleveland East Tech will be back to defend its Class "A" track crown as will a crack team of thin clads in Class "B" from Xenia O. S. S. O.

Proving its win in 1940 was no fluke, a great golf quartet from Toledo DeVillibiss came within a stroke of breaking the all-time Toledo district record and will be back in Columbus for another championship. Only the tennis ranks will be wide-open with anything liable to happen with the thrones vacated.

Cleveland East Tech's domination in the "A" track fight has spread over a span of many years. The Clevelanders have won the title seven times since 1920, five of the wins coming since 1930.

The Class "A" baseball race again will probably be dominated by the defending champion Columbus North team and the 1940 runner-up from Greenfield McClain. North won the central district in comparatively easy fashion while Greenfield McClain was likewise impressive at the south-eastern Ohio district at Athens.

Don Grate and Eldon Newland, Greenfield's great pitching twins, allowed but eight hits in four games as the McClain was sweeping through the hill-country opposition.

BOSS OF CHICAGO TEAM SCOFFS AT LEO'S PROTEST
CHICAGO, May 20—General Manager James T. Gallagher of the Chicago Cubs expressed confidence today that Brooklyn Manager Leo Durocher's protest of the Sunday and Monday Cubs-Dodgers games—both of which the Bruins won—will not be allowed.

Durocher protested the games on the ground the Cubs are over the 25-player limit. The Brooklyn pilot insisted that Outfielder Charley Gilbert, obtained by Chicago from Montreal on May 6, is a member of the team although he has not yet reported to the club—thus giving the Bruins 26 players.

Gallagher, however, took another slant on the matter, saying: "We are thoroughly familiar with the National League rules, and Gilbert is not yet a member of the team. We have not been notified that Gilbert has left Montreal, and don't know what he's doing in Philadelphia (Gilbert was reported to be in Philadelphia for treatment of an injured ankle). Whatever Gilbert is doing is his own business. Anyway, he is not yet a Cub."

BLUES ON TOP BY GAME, HALF IN ASSOCIATION

COLUMBUS, May 20—The Kansas City Blues enjoyed a game and a half lead over the field in the American Association flag race today, thanks to Lloyd Christopher's home run in the 13th inning of a game with second-place Minneapolis.

Christopher stepped up to the plate in last night's contest at Kansas City with the score tied at six all and one man out. He knocked the ball over the left-field wall to give the Blues the 7 to 6 decision. Charley Wensloff, who started for the Blues tired in the eighth when Minneapolis tied the score but three more Kansas City hurlers managed to hold the Millers scoreless until the 13th.

Louisville went around Columbus into third place by defeating the Red Birds at the Kentucky city, 5 to 3. Columbus got two runs and seven hits during the first four rounds off Bill Sayles but got only one safety after that until two were out in the ninth. Joe Glenn led the 12-hit Louisville attack on Red Barrett with a triple and a single.

In a battle for the cellar, St. Paul managed to keep out of the coal hole by defeating Milwaukee in a slugfest, 14 to 11. The Saints gained a seven-run lead in the second by routing Dave Koslo, but the Brewers chased Bill Clemenson from the mound and tide the count at 8 to 8 in the fourth on Joe Abreu's homer. The Saints, however, scored five more times in the eighth.

In the other game last night, Indianapolis nosed out Toledo, 6 to 5, although the Indians' ace right-hander, Ray Starr, was knocked out of the box for the first time this season.

BOSS OF CHICAGO TEAM SCOFFS AT LEO'S PROTEST
CHICAGO, May 20—General Manager James T. Gallagher of the Chicago Cubs expressed confidence today that Brooklyn Manager Leo Durocher's protest of the Sunday and Monday Cubs-Dodgers games—both of which the Bruins won—will not be allowed.

Durocher protested the games on the ground the Cubs are over the 25-player limit. The Brooklyn pilot insisted that Outfielder Charley Gilbert, obtained by Chicago from Montreal on May 6, is a member of the team although he has not yet reported to the club—thus giving the Bruins 26 players.

BAER, CHAMPION END HARD WORK

Title Clash Scheduled For Washington Park Friday Night

WASHINGTON, May 20—Buddy Baer and Champion Joe Louis today scheduled their last heavy training before their 15-round heavyweight title Friday night.

Louis, training in Washington, and Baer at his nearby Olney, Md., camp will take on several spar mates during the day and then end their work tomorrow with light exercises.

Arthur Donovan was appointed by the District of Columbia boxing commission to referee the fight to be held at Griffith Stadium. The ball park is scaled for $175,000 and the advance sale already is $55,000.

Jack Blackburn, Louis' trainer, said he was completely satisfied with the way his fighter is shaping up, adding:

"Baer may be tough for a couple of rounds. We're not underestimating the fellow at all. It may be an easy fight or it may be one of the toughest Louis has had in a long time. We are prepared for a tough battle."

Cards on Top; Vandy Wins

St. Louis Takes Lead As Dodgers Fail; McKeechne To Use Thompson Against Braves; Indians, Yanks Lose

Steadily climbing, the St. Louis Cardinals today stood on the top-most rung of the National League ladder and left it to the rest to catch them.

They hit the top yesterday without leaving their hotel room. Idle in keeping with the schedule, the Cards advanced to first place when the Brooklyn Dodgers lost to the Chicago Cubs by 14 to 1. That's right—14 to 1. And it probably will still stick despite a protest by Manager Leo Durocher of the losers. He protested that game and the one of Sunday on the grounds that the Cubs' roster included 26 men instead of the stipulated 25 for this point of the season.

The Dodgers lost by virtue of a nine run second inning, which included a home run by Claude Passeau with the bases loaded. Thus the latter contributed to his own victory as the Cub pitcher and he allowed only four hits, being deprived of a shutout by Babe Phelps' homer.

Vandy on Mound

The Cincinnati Reds pounded out 14 hits to down the Boston Braves by 7 to 3, Johnny Vander Meer scoring his third victory of the year.

A fifth-inning four-run outburst, on four hits and two Braves' miscues, put Cincinnati ahead, a lead that was never relinquished. Single runs were added by the Redlegs in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings.

Vander Meer was yanked in the ninth with none out after Carvel Rowell hit a home run for the Braves. Max West had touched Vander Meer for a four-bagger in the previous inning. Joe Beggs finished without allowing a Brave to reach first base.

Five of the Redlegs got two hits each. They were Ernie Koy, Aleno, Lombardi, Eddie Joost and Vander Meer himself.

Manager Bill McKeechne indicated he would send Junior Thompson to the mound for the Reds today to face Erickson of the Braves.

The Pittsburgh Pirates beat the New York Giants, 2 to 1, as Max Butcher turned in a four-hitter against Carl Hubbell's six-hitter.

In the American League, the St. Louis Browns banged their way to a 5 to 1 victory over the New York Yankees. Denny Galehouse thus scored his third victory for the Brownies with the aid of errors by Gordon and Crosetti.

But the league-leading Indians also went down to defeat again, losing to the Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 4. Less McCrabb, rookie righthander, scored the victory.

The Detroit Tigers scored their fifth straight win, beating the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 2, behind the four-hit hurling of Johnny Gorsch.

The second place Chicago White Sox capitalized on the wildness of Vernon Kennedy to down the Washington Senators, 8 to 2.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 20—Tom Harmon, the University of Michigan's great football player, expressed surprise today at published reports that his Garry, Ind., draft board might interfere with his plans to go to Hollywood to make a movie after he graduates in June.

The fleet, all-American halfback said he had returned his questionnaire a month and a half ago and that in it he had said he has been the sole support of his mother and father since after last football season.

He said he knew nothing of reports his draft board had deferred him until July 1 with the understanding that the only way the deferment be continued would be that he enroll in summer school. Harmon said he is not going to enroll in summer school. But he added:

"After all, I'm no different than the next fellow. My draft board will decide when and why I'm called on not. I haven't been informed of my classification."

Massillon Fans Claim Gillom Is Greatest; He'll Enter Ohio State

By Jerry Brondfield

MASSILLON, May 20—There'll never be another Gillom. That was the mournful and all-too definite verdict of Massillon sports followers today as they await the graduation from Washington High School of the boy who is regarded as the greatest all-around athlete ever to come out of this hot-bed of scholastic sports.

Some, not quite as conservative, insist Horace Gillom is the greatest athlete in Ohio high school sports annals.

That, of course, is quite a statement, but there is much evidence to substantiate it.

When the big colored boy graduates June 12 he leaves behind him a list of accomplishments that have the biggest colleges in the country clamoring for his services.

Standing 6 feet, 2 inches and weighing 195 pounds, Gillom has perfect physical proportions. Combine his size with cat-like grace, coordination and speed and you have the perfect athlete.

Entering Washington High School from Longfellow Junior High School, where much of the Tigers' athletic talent is spawned, Gillom was a great end in football for three years, making all-Ohio in his junior and senior years.

Kicks 60 Yards

He punted 50 yards, backed up the line, carried the ball brilliantly on end-around plays. He made the all-Ohio basketball team as a junior, and led the Tigers in scoring for two years.

In track he performed brilliantly in the 100 and the low hurdles. Never did Gillom play in a losing football game during his high school career. He was one of the Tigers' leading scorers. As a pass receiver he was virtually unstoppable.

Paul Brown, new grid coach of Ohio State who developed Gillom, described him as a "wildcat" when it comes to competitive spirit.

An average student who not once was an eligibility problem, Gillom this fall will follow Brown to Columbus, where he intends to major in physical education.

Gillom's departure from Massillon is a cause celebre in Canton, Steubenville, Alliance and other spots where he made a shambles of the opposition.

From now on, they figure, the worry belongs to Michigan, Northwestern, Illinois, et al.

SCHOOLBOYS TO SEEK OHIO TITLE

Runners, Golfers, Baseball Players To Compete At University

By Larry Newman
COLUMBUS, May 20—Hundreds of high school athletes—from burly shot put artists to lithe punters of the golf links—will swarm into Ohio Stadium Friday and Saturday for the final act in the 1940-41 scholastic athletic drama.

The grand finale will feature the awarding of the Buckeye schoolboy crowns to the best baseball, track and golf teams in the state and the best athletes of the tennis courts who started the long grind to the state championship several weeks ago along with 20,000 other high school athletes.

Defending champions will be back in nearly every event in an attempt to withstand the withering fire of the challengers. Columbus North and Powhatan Point, Class "A" and "B" baseball titlists last spring, have survived district diamond competition for a second term while Cleveland East Tech will be back to defend its Class "A" track crown as will a crack team of thin clads in Class "B" from Xenia O. S. S. O.

Proving its win in 1940 was no fluke, a great golf quartet from Toledo DeWitt came within a stroke of breaking the all-time Toledo district record and will be back in Columbus for another championship. Only the tennis ranks will be wide-open with anything liable to happen with the thrones vacated.

Cleveland East Tech's domination in the "A" track fight has spread over a span of many years. The Clevelanders have won the title seven times since 1920, five of the wins coming since 1930.

The Class "A" baseball race again will probably be dominated by the defending champion Columbus North team and the 1940 runner-up from Greenfield McClain. North won the central district in comparatively easy fashion while Greenfield McClain was likewise impressive at the southeastern Ohio district at Athens. Don Grate and Eldon Newland, Greenfield's great pitching twins, allowed but eight hits in four games as the McClain was sweeping through the hill-country opposition.

PETEY SCALZO WINS
MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 20—Petey Scalzo of New York, NBA featherweight champion, successfully defended his title in Milwaukee Auditorium last night against Phil Zwick of Kaukauna, Wis., in the first 15-round bout ever staged in Wisconsin. Eight thousand fans, Milwaukee's biggest fight crowd in years, saw Scalzo outpoint the 35-year-old Wisconsin challenger by taking complete command of the infighting.

THE HERO AND THE GOAT
The Hero—Claude Passeau, who held the Dodgers to four hits while the Cubs pushed Brooklyn out of first place, 14 to 1.

The Goat — Vernon Kennedy, who was sent to the showers in the seventh inning of his debut with the Senators after walking seven and hitting one batter, enabling the White Sox to win, 8 to 2.

FAITH IN A GREAT EXPANSE OF ocean as a barrier to enemies is a sort of Maginot-mindedness that afflicts too many Americans today.

BOSS OF CHICAGO TEAM SCOFFS AT LEO'S PROTEST

CHICAGO, May 20—General Manager James T. Gallagher of the Chicago Cubs expressed confidence today that Brooklyn Manager Leo Durocher's protest of the Sunday and Monday Cubs-Dodgers games—both of which the Bruins won—will not be allowed.

Durocher protested the games on the ground the Cubs are over the 25-player limit. The Brooklyn pilot insisted that Outfielder Charley Gilbert, obtained by Chicago from Montreal on May 6, is a member of the team although he has not yet reported to the club—thus giving the Bruins 26 players.

Gallagher, however, took another slant on the matter, saying: "We are thoroughly familiar with the National League rules, and Gilbert is not yet a member of the team. We have not been notified that Gilbert has left Montreal, and don't know what he's doing in Philadelphia (Gilbert was reported to be in Philadelphia for treatment of an injured ankle). Whatever Gilbert is doing is his own business. Anyway, he is not yet a Cub."

would continue its struggle against the Nazis despite German occupation of the Hellenic mainland.

In the intervening weeks since the German occupation was completed, the Germans have consolidated their positions there despite frequent heavy British air raids on strategic airbases and other objectives.

Crete, lying roughly 75 miles below the southern tip of the Peloponnese, is within easy range of German dive-bombers and troop carrying planes based on the mainland.

Evacuated Men There

British and Greek forces, thousands of whom were evacuated to Crete following the collapse of the allied front in Greece, have heavily reinforced the island stronghold in recent weeks.

Military circles in London emphasized today that a parachute attack on Crete "would not have a chance" unless it were carried out on a gigantic scale.

Diplomatic sources said they did not know whether King George is still at Crete, but in the absence of information to the contrary it was assumed that he had remained on the island.

ABSLAM CRIMES, CONFEDERATE MAIL RUNNER—by M. M. Qualie. This biography of a confederate mail runner is edited by M. M. Qualie from Captain Grimes' own story. Captain Grimes was a river pilot on the Mississippi; when the Civil War began he enlisted along with Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) in one of the confederate battalions being raised in Missouri. Grimes became famous as a mail carrier between the Missouri soldiers in the South and their families at home. He often passed through the lines, frequently was arrested, and twice sentenced to death as a spy—and lived to tell the tale.

IVAN THE TERRIBLE

—by Stephen Graham. This book, an excellent example of biographical writing, is a full and detailed picture of the first Russian ruler to bear the title of Tsar. It is also a genuine picture of Russia during the 16th century—the same period during which Elizabeth reigned in England. Ivan at first was a good ruler and a brilliant statesman. After the death of Anastasia, his first wife, Ivan became obsessed with cruelty. While he still retained some of his ability as a statesman, Ivan committed many brutal deeds, including wholesale executions and finally the murder of his own son.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

BRILLIANCY ON DEFENSE

AMONG THE rarest jewels in all of bridge is beautiful defensive play which can be recognized as such. One of the nearest moves to the beat an opponent's contract is the Deschappelles Coup, whereby a player deliberately sacrifices a high card in order to knock out an entry—using up a high card so placed that it seemed otherwise to be a trick winner ultimately. But one of the rarest of the rare is a double Deschappelles Coup, in which the same player makes the same maneuver twice to beat a contract or prevent overtricks.

That same contract was reached, by only slightly different bidding, at all tables of the duplicate tournament where this hand was dealt. Most of the declarers made an overtrick, including those where the club 3 was lead, but one of them was held to his bare contract, after that lead, by the most superlative kind of defense.

East came up with the K on the club lead, and South let it hold, so he could be in position for a quick ruff on his third club if East repeated the suit. Where that was done, South won with the A, but then worked the diamond finesse, played the diamond A for a heart discard, ruffed a diamond with his spade 8, ruffed the club 3 with the Q and led the spade 5 from dummy. With the diamonds now set up and hearts for entries, it made no difference what East did. The contract was safe, plus an overtrick.

East's brilliant work, at another table, came right upon his winning that first trick with the club K. He immediately led the heart J to the Q to knock out entries. South entered his own hand with the spade 5 to the J, finessed the diamond Q, laid down the diamond A, ruffed a diamond to set up the suit, then led the spade K. East took this with his A and led back his heart K—second Deschappelles Coup of the hand. This took the heart A out of dummy, while East still had his trump 7 to block the run of the suit, so South never was able to discard his last club. He therefore lost two tricks in clubs and one in spades, and barely made his contract.

and British forces which was found aboard.

"A German South Seas raider, on sighting the Zamzam, ordered her to heave to in strict accordance with international prize rules to permit examination of her contraband cargo.

"Thereafter the ship was sunk. "Not a single member of the crew or any other person aboard was injured."

(Editor's Note: The grounds on which the German raiding captain satisfied himself that contraband was carried were not disclosed. According to the American Export Lines which handled the liner's freight, she carried lubricating oil, automobiles and manufactured goods as well as the full equipment of an ambulance unit. There were no munitions aboard, the Export Lines said, and nothing that could be "remotely connected with implements of war" except for the ambulances. It was recalled, however, that when the ship cleared New York, a memorandum distributed to newspapers and press associations classified the Zamzam as a "belligerent" vessel. This statement was later described by the British-American Ambulance Corps as "erroneous.")

(At the same time, William V. C. Ruxton, president of the corps, said: "The Zamzam was carrying a non-belligerent cargo and these men were going as non-combatants.")

While the brief official statement called the German ship involved in the dramatic incident a "South Seas" raider, this did not imply operations in the South Pacific alone. The term "South Seas" is used by Germans to cover all ocean tracts below the equator.

Obviously A Raider

It was obvious that the ship which sank the Zamzam was a surface raider—possibly a "Q-ship" of the cleverly-disguised Wolf type, and not a submarine. Germany has no submersible capable of taking aboard the full complement of a ship the size of the Zamzam.

German officialdom sharply attacked the "triumphant, eager and over-hasty howling of British-American warmongers who lamented the alleged dead of the Zamzam sinking prematurely in an effort to 'stampede public opinion.'

A spokesman said: "We must again remind the world that all ships carrying contraband into enemy territory fall under international regulations. Anyone traveling on them or who otherwise knowingly exposes his person to such a situation incurs the risks inherent in sea warfare. "British propaganda cannot hide these facts. It would be well for American to keep in mind the clearly-defined rules of war. These affect all ships, regardless of nationality, that carry contraband or enter the war zones.

"And the latter include the Red Sea."

(Editor's Note: This remark apparently was directed against the Roosevelt administration, which recently relaxed restrictions to enable American ships to enter the Red Sea.)

LONDON, May 20—The possibility that the German raider which removed the passengers and crew from the Egyptian liner Zamzam may be attempting to reach a port in occupied France was advanced in official British quarters today.

(Editor's Note: The official German announcement said the Zamzam's crew and passengers were landed somewhere in "German occupied territory.")

Official British quarters were without any definite information concerning the Zamzam but were inclined to accept the German explanation that she was sunk by a Nazi raider after those aboard were taken off.

NAZIS, EMPIRE UNITS ENGAGE IN BIG BATTLE

Hitler's Raiders Land On Stronghold In Great Numbers

will continue its struggle against the Nazis despite German occupation of the Hellenic mainland.

In the intervening weeks since the German occupation was completed, the Germans have consolidated their positions there despite frequent heavy British air raids on strategic airdromes and other objectives.

Crete, lying roughly 75 miles below the southern tip of the Peloponnese, is within easy range of German dive-bombers and troop-carrying planes based on the mainland.

Evacuated Men There

British and Greek forces, thousands of whom were evacuated to Crete following the collapse of the allied front in Greece, have heavily reinforced the island stronghold in recent weeks.

Military circles in London emphasized today that a parachute attack on Crete "would not have a chance" unless it were carried out on a gigantic scale.

Diplomatic sources said they did not know whether King George is still at Crete, but in the absence of information to the contrary it was assumed that he had remained on the island.

Library Notes

New Additions To The Library

ABSALOM CRIMES, CONFEDERATE MAIL RUNNER

By M. M. Quail. This biography of a confederate mail runner is edited by M. M. Quail from Captain Grimes' own story. Captain Grimes was a river pilot on the Mississippi; when the Civil War began he enlisted along with Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) in one of the confederate battalions raised in Missouri. Grimes became famous as a mail carrier between the Missouri soldiers in the South and their families at home. He often passed through the lines, frequently was arrested, and twice sentenced to death as a spy—and lived to tell the tale.

IVAN THE TERRIBLE

By Stephen Graham. This book, an excellent example of biographical writing, is a full and detailed picture of the first Russian ruler to bear the title of Tsar. It is also a genuine picture of Russia during the 16th century—the same period during which Elizabeth reigned in England.

Ivan at first was a good ruler and a brilliant statesman. After the death of Anastasia, his first wife, Ivan became obsessed with cruelty. While he still retained some of his ability as a statesman, Ivan committed many brutal deeds, including wholesale executions and finally the murder of his own son.

THE MORAL BASIS OF DEMOCRACY

By A. T. Hadley. These "Sunday morning talks to students" as collected in this volume do not follow any chronological sequence. Some are many years old. There is little direct reference to democracy in them, and they might be called the moral basis of character. They consist of the interpretation of Christian ethics and fall into two parts: the ethics of citizenship and ethics of leadership.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

BRILLIANCY ON DEFENSE

AMONG THE rarest jewels in all of bridge is beautiful defensive play which can be recognized as such. One of the neatest moves to beat an opponent's contract is the Deschappelles Coup, whereby a player deliberately sacrifices a high card in order to knock out an entry—using up a high card so placed that it seemed otherwise to be a trick winner ultimately. But one of the rarest of the rare is a double Deschappelles Coup, in which the same player makes the same maneuver twice to beat a contract or prevent overtricks.

That same contract was reached, by only slightly different bidding, at all tables of the duplicate tournament where this hand was dealt. Most of the declarers made an overtrick, including those where the club 3 was lead, but one of them was held to his bare contract, after that lead, by the most superlative kind of defense.

East came up with the K on the club lead, and South let it hold, so he could be in position for a quick ruff on his third club if East repeated the suit. Where that was

TWO GIVEN PAROLES BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Commissioners' paroles were granted Monday to James Toles, South Scioto Street, and Robert Reynolds, Wayne Township, both in county jail on drunken driving charges.

Toles had served 122 days in jail and under the terms of the parole agrees to pay the costs of prosecution of his case and the balance of his fine, $14.33, at the rate of $2 a week.

Reynolds was committed on February 28, and has agreed to pay the court costs and the balance of his fine, $68.50, at the rate of $5 a week.

Ernest Daniel Woodfork, Bloomingsburg, arrested Sunday on South Court Street for driving when under the influence of alcohol, was fined $100 and costs by Mayor W. B. Cady, Tuesday, and committed to county jail.

EARL S. DUVALL FILES PETITION FOR DIVORCE

Earl S. Duvall, Harrison Township, has filed divorce action against his wife, Grace, of Columbus charging her with extreme cruelty. Duvall, in his petition filed at Common Pleas Court Tuesday, claims his wife continually was finding fault with him and embarrassing him before friends. Both Duvall and his wife are physicians and practice in Columbus.

done, South won with the A, but then worked the diamond finesse, played the diamond A for a heart discard, ruffed a diamond with his spade 8, ruffed the club 8 with the Q and led the spade 5 from dummy. With the diamonds now set up and hearts for entries, it made no difference what East did. The contract was safe, plus an overtrick.

East's brilliant work, at another table, came right upon his winning that first trick with the club K. He immediately led the heart J to the Q to knock out entries. South entered his own hand with the spade 5 to the J, finessed the diamond Q, laid down the diamond A, ruffed a diamond to set up the suit, then led the spade K. East took this with his A and led back his heart K—second Deschappelles Coup of the hand. This took the heart A out of dummy, while East still had his trump 7 to block the run of the suit, so South never was able to discard his last club. He therefore lost two tricks in clubs and one in spades, and barely made his contract.

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

THE STRIKERS CONTINUE

A short time ago the American Federation of Labor announced a program of voluntary cooperation to avoid strikes in defense industries. That patriotic effort has now run on the reef of outlaw strikes. An example is the strike in eleven Pacific Coast shipyards working on $500,000,000 of navy contracts.

And so we are blockaded, not on Atlantic sea lanes, but at home. The "bridge of ships" is being torpedoed by the Harry Bridges collection of labor leaders. Meantime Madame Perkins remains in office. As she has defended this type of leadership for eight years, her continuance in office is almost certain to be interpreted by the outlaws as assurance that they will get no more than a slap on the wrist. Her immediate resignation is imperative to national defense.

Since the defense program was inaugurated last June strikes have caused the direct loss of 14,000,000 man days of work. What does this mean in terms of steel and munitions of war?

If all this lost time had been devoted to the manufacture of steel, it would have produced 3,000,000 tons over what actually has been delivered. If these 14,000,000 man days had been used in other work, they would have produced 6,000 pursuit planes, or 1,200 bombers. In terms of naval vessels they would have produced 84 submarines, 74 destroyers, or 18 battle cruisers. These figures were compiled by Congressman Ditter of Pennsylvania.

We talk about munitions being sunk in the ocean. We are sinking them in the earth. We talk about convoys to Europe. We need convoys in American factories.

In Britain only 78,000 man days per month were lost by strikes during 1940. Since last June we have lost 1,250,000 man days per month. Our strike loss has been sixteen times that of Britain.

And what are we doing about all this? Nothing except expediency and mustard plasters. We are not getting down to basic principles.

This column has pointed out the futility and injustice of outlawing the right to strike. It believes the rank and file American wants to work, and to avoid the stigma of blockading the defense of his country. But he is at the mercy of outlaws and goons. He has no protection from public authority. We are not protecting his constitutional right to work, whether he belongs to a union or no union.

We believe the workers themselves will put an end to outlaw or unjustified strikes if this basic right to work is protected from violence. Last year the House of Representatives passed a bill to amend the Wagner Act by a 2 to 1 vote. That bill was supported by the A. F. of L. It died in the Senate.

One short paragraph of that bill has been reintroduced in the House as a separate bill by Congressman Halleck of Indiana, a member of the Special Committee which investigated N.L.R.B. It provides in substance that no employer can be compelled by the National Labor Relations Board to reinstate an employee who has engaged in violence or the seizure of property. In short, if a man on the picket line uses a gas pipe on the man who wants to work, he loses his job. I believe Congressman Halleck has a key which will unlock a door.

We must return to fundamentals. They are:

1. Men have the constitutional right to work.
2. They have the right to join

Ex-President Davila of Chile, after greeting 74-year-old Secretary of War Stimson, remarked: "He looks better than when I knew him ten years ago." Davila was Chilean Ambassador in Washington when Stimson was Secretary of State under Hoover. . . . It escaped general attention, but fair-minded Judge Letts of the U. S. Court, District of Columbia, forced the Dies Committee to return the papers of three Baltimore and Washington Communists seized at their homes. Private citizens still have rights even if the country is on an emergency basis. Judge Letts inferred. . . . Ex-Attorney General Homer Cummings turns down about 60 percent of the law cases offered his firm. He will not take a case which is contrary to the policy of the Roosevelt Administration. . . . Mrs. Tom Walsh, Cuban widow of the late Senator from Montana, has rented one of her Havana mansions to King Carol and Madame Lupescu. Another of her houses—she has several—is now leased to Tropical, the new night club featuring African-Russian dancing, said to be so sensational that New York managers who visited Havana are negotiating for its appearance in New York next season.

LATIN AMERICAN NAZIS
One confidential problem the Nelson Rockefeller Committee is trying to iron out is created by Nazi agents who take advantage of American business firms in Latin America. Without meaning to do so, U. S. firms have indirectly helped finance the spread of subversive influence and anti-American propaganda through the tricks of German sales concerns.

For years many U. S. exporters have allowed independent German firms to distribute their goods in Latin America. They did this because the Germans had lived in South America longer, had better contacts, were better salesmen. In recent times, however, the State Department discovered that some German firms were using their American business connection to undermine the United States. Here is how it works: An American firm will spend a large amount of money for advertising in loyal South American newspapers. But the advertising is placed through the local sales connections of that firm, in most cases German. And the Germans use that advertising to high-pressure the local paper into carrying Hitler's speeches, the Nazi DNB news reports, and other pro-German propaganda.

For some months now, the Rockefeller Committee on Cultural Relations, in cooperation with the State and Commerce Departments, has been trying to stop this. A confidential list of Nazi firms was prepared, and most American firms, when warned of the situation, arranged for new non-Axis distributors.

However, some companies have demurred on the ground that a change would mean loss of business. General Motors, for instance, at first refused to sever arrangements with certain German firms which were successfully distributing its automobiles in Latin America.

The matter went up to James D. Mooney, vice president of General Motors, also to Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the board. But nothing happened. Word came back that General Motors saw no reason to make a change in its Latin American sales set-up unless there were a declaration of war or breaking of diplomatic relations with Germany.

Finally, however, Sumner Welles, hard-hitting Under Secretary of State, had a session with Graeme Howard, vice president of General Motors in charge of overseas operations, in which there was some plain talking. In the end, General Motors agreed to cut loose its German sales connections in Latin America.

Note — Meanwhile the production, as distinguished from the sales, end of General Motors in the U. S. has done a magnificent defense job in completing four machine gun factories at Flint and Saginaw, Mich., Syracuse, N. Y., and Dayton, O., last month. The plants weren't scheduled for completion until next December. William Knudsen, former production genius of GM, is the man behind this.

DIVORCE IS ASKED

A 1936 marriage in Circleville went on the rocks Monday in Ross County when Mrs. Dorothy L. Spencer filed suit against Joseph W. Spencer for divorce, charging neglect and cruelty. They were married here October 2, 1936, and have two children.

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

THE STRIKERS CONTINUE

A short time ago the American Federation of Labor announced a program of voluntary cooperation to avoid strikes in defense industries. That patriotic effort has now run on the reef of outlaw strikes. An example is the strike in eleven Pacific Coast shipyards working on $500,000,000 of navy contracts.

And so we are blockaded, not on Atlantic sea lanes, but at home. The "bridge of ships" is being torpedoed by the Harry Bridges collection of labor leaders. Meantime Madame Perkins remains in office. As she has defended this type of leadership for eight years, her continuance in office is almost certain to be interpreted by the outlaws as assurance that they will get no more than a slap on the wrist. Her immediate resignation is imperative to national defense.

Since the defense program was inaugurated last June strikes have caused the direct loss of 14,000,000 man days of work. What does this mean in terms of steel and munitions of war?

If all this lost time had been devoted to the manufacture of steel, it would have produced 3,000,000 tons over what actually has been delivered. If these 14,000,000 man days had been used in other work, they would have produced 6,000 pursuit planes, or 1,200 bombers. In terms of naval vessels they would have produced 84 submarines, 74 destroyers, or 18 battle cruisers. These figures were compiled by Congressman Ditter of Pennsylvania.

We talk about munitions being sunk in the ocean. We are sinking them in the earth. We talk about convoys to Europe. We need convoys in American factories.

In Britain only 78,000 man days per month were lost by strikes during 1940. Since last June we have lost 1,250,000 man days per month. Our strike loss has been sixteen times that of Britain.

And what are we doing about all this? Nothing except expediency and mustard plasters. We are not getting down to basic principles.

This column has pointed out the futility and injustice of outlawing the right to strike. It believes the rank and file American wants to work, and to avoid the stigma of blockading the defense of his country. But he is at the mercy of outlaws and goons. He has no protection from public authority. We are not protecting his constitutional right to work, whether he belongs to a union or no union.

We believe the workers themselves will put an end to outlaw or unjustified strikes if this basic right to work is protected from violence. Last year the House of Representatives passed a bill to amend the Wagner Act by a 2 to 1 vote. That bill was supported by the A. F. of L. It died in the Senate.

One short paragraph of that bill has been reintroduced in the House as a separate bill by Congressman Halleck of Indiana, a member of the Special Committee which investigated N.L.R.B. It provides in substance that no employer can be compelled by the National Labor Relations Board to reinstate an employee who has engaged in violence or the seizure of property. In short, if a man on the picket line uses a gas pipe on the man who wants to work, he loses his job. I believe Congressman Halleck has a key which will unlock a door.

We must return to fundamentals. They are:
1. Men have the constitutional right to work.
2. They have the right to join

LATIN AMERICAN NAZIS

One confidential problem the Nelson Rockefeller Committee is trying to iron out is created by Nazi agents who take advantage of American business firms in Latin America. Without meaning to do so, U. S. firms have indirectly helped finance the spreading of subversive influence and anti-American propaganda through the tricks of German sales concerns.

For years many U. S. exporters have allowed independent German firms to distribute their goods in Latin America. They did this because the Germans had lived in South America longer, had better contacts, were better salesmen. In recent times, however, the State Department discovered that some German firms were using their American business connection to undermine the United States.

Here is how it works: An American firm will spend a large amount of money for advertising in loyal South American newspapers. But the advertising is placed through the local sales connections of that firm, in most cases German. And the Germans use that advertising to high-pressure the local paper into carrying Hitler's speeches, the Nazi DNE news reports, and other pro-German propaganda.

For some months now, the Rockefeller Committee on Cultural Relations, in cooperation with the State and Commerce Departments, has been trying to stop this. A confidential list of Nazi firms was prepared, and most American firms, when warned of the situation, arranged for non-Axis distributors.

However, some companies have demurred on the ground that a change would mean loss of business. General Motors, for instance, at first refused to sever arrangements with certain German firms which were successfully distributing its automobiles in Latin America.

The matter went up to James D. Mooney, vice president of General Motors, also to Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the board. But nothing happened. Word came back that General Motors saw no reason to make a change in its Latin American sales set-up unless there were a declaration of war or breaking of diplomatic relations with Germany.

Finally, however, Sumner Welles, hard-hitting Under Secretary of State, had a session with Graeme Howard, vice president of General Motors in charge of overseas operations, in which there was some plain talking. In the end, General Motors agreed to cut loose its German sales connections in Latin America.

Note — Meanwhile the production, as distinguished from the sales, end of General Motors in the U. S. has done a magnificent defense job in completing four machine gun factories at Flint and Saginaw, Mich., Syracuse, N. Y., and Dayton, O., last month. The plants weren't scheduled for completion until next December. William Knudsen, former production genius of GM, is the man behind this.

MERCHANTS DECIDE AGAINST PARKING METERS

16 GATHER FOR CONFERENCE ON VITAL QUESTION

Council To Hear Suggestions When Wednesday Evening Meeting Is Conducted

BALLOT IS 12 TO FOUR

Changes In Scioto, Franklin Legislation Is Also Advised By Group

Circleville merchants at a meeting Monday evening decided to reverse their earlier stand in favor of parallel parking and use of parking meters and recommend to council Wednesday evening that thirty degree angle parking be put into effect on Court and Main Streets with a provision permitting five minute double parking. No meters would be used under the new proposal.

Protests from some farmers and from some of their city customers against the parallel-parking-with-meters plan prompted them to turn about-face on the issue, the merchants said. Since it was announced that they would recommend the parallel-meter parking system to council at its next meeting, merchants said that many customers had voiced their disapproval, claiming that the 30 degree angle parking system would provide more parking space and at the same time eliminate the difficulty which some drivers have with parallel parking.

216 Cars Permitted
According to figures compiled by the traffic department through the cooperation of Ervin Leist, the 30 degree system allows parking space for 216 cars. At thirty degrees, the average car will take 14½ feet of curb line. Under the parallel system in the 3,115 feet of curb space on Main and Court streets 151 cars can be parked. The local traffic department and the state highway patrol have recommended parallel parking as the safest system which can be adopted.

Among other recommendations which merchants at Monday night's meeting suggested was that parking be limited to one hour rather than two hours, as is the case at the present time. Council will be asked by the merchants to declare the parking proposal an emergency measure, suspend the rules and vote on the issue at Wednesday night's meeting. Should the proposal be passed, the 30 degree system would go in effect at the end of thirty days.

Those opposing the switch to angle parking point to rumors that by July 1 the state may require parallel parking on all federal highways, which would mean that the new system could be operated but a couple of weeks.

Other Suggestions Made
Merchants also voted to recommend parking on one side of the street on Scioto from Pinckney to Franklin and from Franklin from Court to Pickaway. The merchants feel that such a plan would eliminate much of the congestion on Scioto Street where there is an overflow of West Main Street traffic. The Franklin Street ruling was made to keep Franklin Street clear for the fire department.

About sixteen merchants, the largest delegation to meet to discuss the parking situation, were at Monday night's session. George Griffith, chairman of the Retail Merchants Division of the Chamber of Commerce, presided.

The vote on the thirty-degree system was twelve to four.

Today's Garden-Graph

After all danger of frost is past, cucumber seed can be planted out of doors in properly prepared hills. The hills should be prepared by putting a forkful of well-decayed manure in the bottom of each mound, and covering over with two to four inches of soil.

Tent trellis for cucumbers

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, make a tent trellis atop each hill on which the cucumber vines can climb. Use two-inch chicken wire for this purpose, and have the top of the trellis about three feet above ground.

Do not pick cucumbers except when the leaves are dry, as disease is quickly spread by disturbance of the damp foliage.

SUDDEN STORM BLAMED FOR DEATHS OF SEVEN

DAYTON, May 20—The sudden rain and windstorm which swept through Ohio last Friday was officially blamed today for the crash of two army planes in which seven fliers were killed.

Maj. Robert W. Stewart, adjutant at Patterson Field, said the storms were "the only thing we can determine" as the cause for the crashes. He pointed out there were no witnesses of the crashes to aid the official investigation.

"This war," says Prime Minister Menzies of Australia, "is not about the politics of Europe but about the politics of the human race."

FOUR ARMY MEN DIE IN PLANES

Sudden Gust Of Wind May Have Thrown Craft Together

RAINS, S. C., May 20 — Army officials today inspected the wreckage of two light bomber planes which collided and exploded above Rains yesterday, bringing death to four fliers.

Victims of the accident were Second Lieut. Frank B. Ralston of Pittsburgh, Pa., Second Lieut. Allen J. Moore of Reno, Nev., Sergt. David L. Boyd, Frost, Texas, and Corp. Herbert O. Pruitt of Collinsville, Miss.

The planes were part of a flight of six bombers from Savannah, Ga., air base to Langley Field, Va. One of the ships fell on a deserted house.

In advance of the official finding, witnesses to the collision said the ships appeared to have been thrown together by a sudden gust of wind.

Today's Garden-Graph

After all danger of frost is past, cucumber seed can be planted out of doors in properly prepared hills. The hills should be prepared by putting a forkful of well-decayed manure in the bottom of each mound, and covering over with two to four inches of soil.

Tent trellis for cucumbers

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, make a tent trellis atop each hill on which the cucumber vines can climb. Use two-inch chicken wire for this purpose, and have the top of the trellis about three feet above ground.

Do not pick cucumbers except when the leaves are dry, as disease is quickly spread by disturbance of the damp foliage.
